

Joe Scott

Joe has been involved with Beef Expo since 2012 when he became an Open Show Superintendent. As of 2018, Joe has joined the board, now that he is back in Wisconsin full time.

Joe comes from a long line of dairy farmers on both sides, as many Wisconsinites do. But it was his Grandparents starting to raise Red Angus in the 90's that really started Joe's interest in the cattle industry. He always looked forward to the time he could spend there around cattle, and even took a break during college to farm there full time.

While originally from Wisconsin, Joe partially grew up in the heart of Cow/Calf country in SW Missouri. This allowed him to learn a lot from area operations, working for cattle veterinarians, and raising a few calves as a hobby himself. Joe graduated from high school in Missouri and went to his in-state land grant, the University of Missouri, to further his cattle education. He graduated from "MIZZOU" in 2010 with B.S. in Animal Science completing capstones in both Dairy and Beef Production. While in college, Joe got his first taste of running cattle shows by working at and then Co-Chairing the AGR Classic Steer and Heifer Show.

Joe's career in Animal Health has led him across Illinois, Wisconsin, and Missouri. He currently works for IMMVAC, Inc. (Makers of Endovac Vaccines) as the Director of Marketing & National Accounts. Joe lives in the Madison area and is currently starting his own nucleus herd of Red Angus on rented pasture in Sauk County.
